

Anna Mammone-London Personal Profile

Anna Mammone-London possesses an insightful blend of experience in both the business and non-profit worlds. Because of this, she understands the needs and challenges small business entrepreneurs' encounter.

Currently a Business Account Manager for T-Mobile, she previously was a sales rep for Verizon Wireless in New York State and has worked in the non-profit field since her early teens.

She has a hands on technical background in audio/visual and videography and has had some unique experiences working on Broadway plays and concert tours.

She holds a BS degree in Entertainment Business and an A.S. in Show Production and Touring from Full Sail University in Winter Park, FL. While at Full Sail, she received the Merit and Platinum Dreams academic scholarship and was recognized at graduation with the Course Director award for Marketing and Strategic Planning.

Directly after graduation she was one of a handful of college graduates nationwide selected by the Italian American Foundation to be a student ambassador for the Voyage of Discovery program in Italy.

She grew up in a family culture of philanthropy and nonprofit causes. Some of her experiences include: assistant to the president of a national boutique philanthropy firm that serves health care, faith and community based and education clients as well as women in philanthropy programs.

As a community volunteer she has worked with the American Heart Association; US schools programs such as America Reads and Safe Schools/Healthy Students and the National Distance Running Hall of Fame.

She understands the language of the non-profit business world and believes that she is not selling products; she is building relationships and changing lives.
